ART FURNITURE.

CHAMBERLIN, JOHNSON & CO.

FINE ART FURNITURE!

PARLOR SUITES, LIBRARY SUITES,

Both In Leather and Wool Tapestry,

CHAMBER SETS IN MAHOGANY, CHERRY, BIRCH, ANTIQUE OAK, OAK 16th CENTURY, SATIN FINISH WHITE MAPLE, NATURAL CURLY RED BIRCH AND IRISH BOG OAK.

DINING ROOM OUTFITS complete, including Sideboards, Extension Tables, Buffets, China Closets and Chairs, finished in Antique Oak, Old English Oak, Oak Sixteenth Century and real Mahogany. We handle exclusively the WELCH FOLDING BED of Grand Rapids, and we will briefly note its superiority over other folding beds. They lower from the back instead of the front. By this method BETTER VENTILATION is secured and the front is left undisturbed. While these beds OCCUPY NO MORE FLOOR SPACE than any other they contain from THREE TO SIX OTHER PIECES OF FURNITURE, besides a comfortable bed. The bedding and pillows can be arranged ready for occupancy and assured of good ventilation, and be lowered ready for use by simply swinging one end from the wall. We use a three-inch lignumvitæ wheel castor which cannot wear carpets, and renders the bed very easy to move. The legs have an automatic movement which makes it impossible for them to close while the bed is occupied. When the bed is closed they fold flat and lock in position.

THIS BED HAS NO WEIGHTS

These beds are complete, including from THREE TO SIX PIECES OF FURNITURE, DO NOT WEIGH AS MUCH AS THE IRON WEIGHTS ALONE used in other folding beds.

To give the public some idea of the class of furniture we handle, we will name some of the EASTERN and WESTERN FACTORIES from whom we buy exclusively, and whose lines we control for this section of country, viz:

PARLOR FURNITURE--From M. & H. Schrenkeisen, Palmer & Embry, Theo. Hofstatter & Co., all of New York, and S. G. Wilkins, of Chicago.

CHAMBER AND DINING ROOM SUITS--From Berkley & Gay Furniture Co. and Widdicomb Furniture Company, of Grand Rapids.

FANCY FURNITURE--From Oriel Cabinet Company, of Grand Rapids.

Our spring styles are now arriving, and in the course of ten days will be able to show you a better selected and more elegant line of furniture than was ever before exhibited in this country.

ON THE JURY.

ONE WEEK WITH CRIMINALS OF THE CITY COURT.

A Gossipy Description of the Workings of the Machinery of the Law as Observed by One Who Suffered on the Jury.

A week on the jury. The city court jury at that, and—Of Fulton county!

Some rare experiences were crowded into these five short days.

Friday morning bright and early we were all there. We, the jury, ready to promise to try such cause according to the law and evidence in the case, so help us God!

In nothing else are the old forms and expressions of Mother England preserved as they are in the law courts. These quaint old forms are amusing to one who takes the picturesque side of them, and frequently the very dignity they are supposed to uphold is undermined by their very ridiculousness.

"Here's a juror who was ten minutes late, please your honor."

"Well, sir, what excuse have you to offer?"

"The only clerk I had was sick, and then I am not an American citizen, your honor."

"Your last excuse let's you off from jury duty, but you should respect the mandates of the law and be here."

And so—although excused from duty—he was subject to a fine for not being in time to render his excuse.

Judge Van Epps on the bench, grave and dignified, as becomes a dispenser of justice.

Over against the side door, Joe Anthony, for the state, alert and watchful, yet full of fun as a boy.

Captain Couch, his assistant, looming up majestically, his keen blue eye penetrating a criminal with the pertinacity and determination of a corkscrew in discharge of its duty.

Dr. Holliday, his long patriarchal beard giving him an air of venerable placidity, at the clerk's desk.

Genial Judge Wilson, deputy sheriff, calmly looking on.

A baker's dozen of the rest of us good, bad and indifferent, in the jury box.

Young lawyers, middle aged lawyers and old lawyers, moving about the crowded room.

Over against the side door, Joe Anthony, Abernathy and others, court balliffs, keeping their eyes on a row of dusky faces in the prisoners' box.

Not all dusky, but most of them, and a strange admixture of ignorant stupidity, shrewd dissimulation and stolid indifference.

Outside the bar, a dark sea of faces reaching from floor to ceiling. That is the audience. This is the personnel of the city court.

The first day is a busy one. The court must be organized, and the jury sworn in; so that it is nearly noon before the monotony begins in good earnest. A negro is up on a charge of stealing twenty-five cents' worth of oranges.

"He pleads guilty, your honor."

"How about it, Jim?"

"Well, judge, I was sortin' oranges fur de white man, an' I des put some in my pocket. I didn't think de man 'ud have me 'rested des fur takin' dem few oranges."

"Where did you lose your leg?"

"On de railroad."

"Have you ever been here before?"

"Yes, sah."

"What was the charge?"

"Stealin'."

"Well, the court is inclined to be lenient with you because of the smallness of the theft. It is the second time, and you must learn to respect the rights and property of others. Let the prisoner pay a fine of twenty-five dollars, or three months."

So it goes. One after another they came up and pleaded guilty. Solicitor O'Bryan has done his work well, and the jail is being emptied at a rapid rate.

Tuesday morning and we are all in our places. So is the audience, made up of the very scum of Atlanta's vagabond negro population.

Three boys in a bag for stealing sacks at the grain elevator. Ragged and battered, one of them has clad himself in flowing robes and had to tie the strings around his legs to keep his breeches from becoming walking streamers; another has a rag tied around his neck in lieu of a shirt, and the third is principally clad in conscious rectitude and unfeigned innocence.

"Your honor," says Solicitor O'Bryan, lifting his lip, "these were caught in a net. They are the same boys that are here from time to time. They are too young to send to the chain-gang, and too pestilent to let go at large. I don't know what to do with them."

"I wish," says Judge Van Epps, "that this trio could have been exhibited on the stage at DeGrove's on the night of the mass meeting. They would have been an argument more eloquent than anything that was uttered there that night in favor of a house of correction. They are too young to prosecute, and I suppose we will just have to let them go till they get old enough. Remember, boys, you are up here for stealing. When you are brought here again the court will remember this, and will make your punishment all the severer. You and better go to work and quit your thievish habits."

Tuesday passes away as did Monday, in the same dull routine.

Wednesday is a reproduction of the other days, except that a number of bonds are to be forfeited.

"I call your honor's attention to the case of Jim Jones, December term, and move that his bond be forfeited."

"Take the order."

"Mr. Sheriff, call Jim Jones, principal, and John Smith, Joe Jenkins, bondsmen."

The first in measured tones, the second with a jerk, and the last with the dull falling inflection of a disheartened thief.

"John Smith, John Smith, John Smith," in the same manner, and then "Joe Jenkins, Joe Jenkins, Joe Jenkins"—a pause—"Come into court and produce the body of your principal, or your bond will be forfeited"—a semi-circular pause and then—"your bond is forfeited!"

"That's the way Judge Wilson forfeits the bonds. But they tell a good story on the genial deputy sheriff."

One day he was a little absent minded, and he began the empty and formal call in the usual way:

"Richard Roe, Richard Roe, Richard Roe! John Doe, John Doe, John Doe! Come into court and produce the body of your principal, or your bond will be forfeited—that is, come into bond and produce your court or your principal—ahem! ahem!—come into principal—ahem! and produce your principal, or your bond will be forfeited—your bond is forfeited, and the sheriff's face was as red as a red, red rose, as he retired to his corner, after having knocked John Doe and Richard Roe silly in the third round."

Frank O'Bryan passed around the laugh, of which even the court helped himself to a small slice.

Thursday there is a big case, and several lawyers are interested. (God save the jury.)

The case is one of those unprintable, indescribable things that must be witnessed to be appreciated, and the cross-fire of questions maketh Israel to sin, even as did wicked Zebulun.

After awhile the lies are all in, and the prisoner hardly knows which one of the boys he is. He is almost convinced of his own innocence after his witnesses have testified.

Then comes the arraignment, and Solicitor O'Bryan takes the culprit's conscience by the nape of his neck and punches the putty out of the pluggish perforations with the arrows of keen satire; and pummels it to a jelly with forcible logic, and the prisoner is less triumphant, and begins to doubt the sincerity of his own convictions.

The attorney for the defense rises up and smites the rock of testimony until torrents of revelation gush out.

The prisoner proceeds to explain the law and the evidence and so on, to the discreet jurors, who have awakened from a refreshing sleep enjoyed during the speaking.

So clear and easy to be understood are his illustrations, that the five honest men, good and true, who are to decide whether the prisoner at the bar shall become one of Tom Donahoe's pets, or is to be turned out in the cold, cold world, see the case in its true light, and with solemn and measured tread they take their departure for the jury room, their noses high in the air, to there are no people on God's green earth who have a higher opinion of themselves than a petit jury.

The attorneys lay wagers as to what the verdict will be, and the audience keep their off eye on the door of the jury room, where Joe Anthony, the watch dog of the city court, sits in state.

Oh, the privilege of being a juror! These folks outside would give worlds to know what is going on in there. Not that many of them are interested, but cruel curiosity is gnawing their vitals.

THE HOTEL ANDREWS.

The Magnificent Inn that Will Soon Be Open to the Public.

LA GRANGE, Ga., February 28.—[Special.]—The booming of cannon announced the beginning of the work of demolishing the old structure known as the Holmes hotel—not that the old was loved less, but the new was desired more. It has been nine or ten months since that good work was begun. Today, the Hotel Andrews lifts its magnificent proportions to the sky, and inside its capacious walls an army of plasterers is at work, finishing the rooms. Within two months' time, it is believed that its wide and hospitable doors will be thrown open for the reception of guests.

With pencil and note-book, a representative of THE CONSTITUTION went through the new structure the other day, charmed by the gentleman who is thus staking his thousands upon LaGrange's future. Save the building of the cotton factory, nothing that has been done within a decade has contributed more to give LaGrange a splendid reputation abroad and to attract to her the gaze of the great world, than this fine caravansary. Mr. Andrews has not only made a good investment, but has done our city a vast benefit, which she is not slow to appreciate.

The new hotel fronts on Main street, through which flows the stream of travel and commerce. It is on the direct route to the depot and only a few paces from the public square. It has 104 feet front, and runs back, at the northern end, sixty-six feet, and at the southern end seventy-six feet. The foundation walls are of rock, and extend four feet, well down into the clay. The lower brick walls are sixteen inches in thickness, the upper, twelve. The building is three stories in height—forty feet from base to parapet.

In the center you enter the grand lobby, floored with marble tiling and finished in beautiful style. Its width is twenty-five and length fifty-seven feet, and the ceiling, there is no plastering overhead throughout the whole building is fifteen feet high. It is flanked on the right by two handsome offices, 18x30 feet which will be rented to professional men, and on the left by the grand saloon, 18x30 feet. Adjoining the latter is a store room, 25x75 feet. The ladies' entrance is between the lobby and the offices, and leads directly by stairway to the halls and parlors on the second floor.

A spacious billiard room, 26x40 feet joins the lobby and is entered from it by wide doors. On the opposite or north side, is the barber shop and gentlemen's closets. A hall leads to the sample room, 16x30 feet, on the right. The dining room, which is in the rear, and 30x40 feet in size, is reached from the lobby by a glass covered way.

A grand stairway also leads to the ladies' lobby or arcade above. From this, as a center, radiate the halls that lead to the various rooms on that floor. At the head of the ladies' stairway are the handsome parlors, which look out upon Main street, and are most delightfully and conveniently situated. A portiere will divide the front from the main lobby, making a cool, breezy summer parlor and opening out into the veranda in front.

Back of the lobby is the conservatory. Here all beautiful plants will refresh the vision. It will be amply lighted and will be a pleasant resort at all times. At the landing of the grand stairway there will be an ornamental window, which will add to the general effect of the interior. On this floor is the linen room, a ladies bath room and closets.

The rooms on all the floors are thirty-five in number. All are well ventilated, and will be beautiful with marble mantles and hearths. Closets large enough to stow away a saratoga trunk, and nearly as large as a dressing room are connected with the various bed-rooms.

The whole building is a model of arrangement, with all the latest conveniences to make life in it a luxury and a joy.

Brace & Morgan, Atlanta, drew the designs, and it is a monument to their taste and skill. Jenkins is superintendent of construction. The work has been thoroughly done under Mr. Andrews's personal supervision. He is now perfecting his plans for the finishing and early opening of the hotel.

Get the best! Dr. Bull's Worm Destroyers are the best. They taste good. They are safe. They are sure.

This is the situation, and it throws considerable light on the gubernatorial campaign. It is worth a careful study, and there is no doubt as possible, and as near as possible a reflex of the average sentiment of the state. THE COMMISSIONERS addressed a letter to the secretary of every county alliance in the state, asking his first and second choice for governor, and his opinion as to who the farmers of the counties favored.

[illegible]

We publish below the replies received, though we have not as yet had time to hear from all of the counties in the state, the postoffices of the gentlemen addressed being in many instances removed from the railroad, and more than a week being required to hear from them.

But from the answers received, which are published below, as coming from the secretaries of every county alliance heard from, it is clear to observe that Mr. Northern is decidedly in the lead with the alliance. He has developed a strength of about two to one against the field, and the answers that are coming in keep up this ratio in his favor.

It therefore looks decidedly as if Mr. Northern is not only the favorite of the alliance, but also of the towns and cities.

THE ALLIANCE SECRETARIES.

Mr. W. B. Townsend, of Dahlonega, Lumpkin county.

YOUR BLOOD

May Be Your Ruin—Find Out What Is The Matter and Be Treated.

Piles (Hemorrhoids) are blind, bleeding, and protruding; all produced by the same causes, which are constipation, irregular habits, natural weakness (hereditary, etc.). They are generally considered dangerous only when they endanger life or health from loss of blood. They are the parent of all other diseases of the bowels, such as ulceration of bowels, cancer, stricture of same, together with fistula in ano, and all their fearful results. Such being the result of neglect; can you afford to take such chances? You may dread the severe operation you have been told was necessary to cure you; if so you need not wait any longer, for all the suffering you will have formerly had to undergo can now be avoided. My mode of treating all these diseases is both pleasant and satisfactory, and will not cost you one hour to your house, detain you from your business, or rob you of your pleasure. Can you afford to put off attending to this matter until your life is a burden to you, or will you act wisely and at once? If you wish any information further, I can give you all the information you will want, and will cheerfully do so. Many of my patients will gladly tell you what I have done for them, and on application to my office will give you the same. My success in the past I make my standard for the future. Having spent years of my life in the study of these diseases and their treatment, I have acquired an experience invaluable in the successful management of all cases of these diseases. I have devoted my time entirely to any of these troubles I will treat you, promising the recent and most improved treatment with my office and write for information. Always give a full history of your case, so that I can give you a reliable answer. Respectfully,

COLUMBUS.

The Lowell of the South.

MILLIONS IN MANUFACTORIES

Extensive Industrial Growth.

WONDERFUL RIVER ADVANTAGES

And Its Growing Railroad Facilities.

UNIVERSAL BUILDING ACTIVITY

Magnificent Development in Everything.

Boundless Resources and Multifarious Interests

The Enormous Magnitude of a City's Wealth.

A Strong Array of Figures That Speak for Themselves.

The distinctive features of Columbus may be thus summarized:

An annual trade of $11,235,400.

Six million dollars in manufacturing industries.

Nearly three million dollars in banking capital.

Three million dollars in mercantile interests.

Ten millions dollars in various taxable values.

Fifty-four trains going in and out of the city daily.

More available water power than any city in Georgia.

The largest and best equipped dummy line in the state.

More savings bank deposits than any city in the south.

Operating the only Mitchell quilt factories in the southern states.

Manufactures the celebrated Stratton ice machine, known all over the world.

Has the wonderfully low tax rate of one per cent with a bonded debt of $480,000.

Boasts of the largest flour mill in the state, and the largest cotton and woolen mills in the south.

Her varied industries give regular and profitable employment to six thousand contented operatives.

The home of the widely known and superior Hill automatic sprinkler, the best contrivance against fire.

Situated on a fast flowing, navigable river, with five lines of steamboats, doing an annual business of $15,000,000.

Blessed with a splendid system of sewerage, which adds to her unexcelled health, showing a statistical death rate of 18.13 per one hundred.

One of the finest systems of waterworks in the south, and an admirable electrical plant that makes it a most beautifully lighted city.

A superior system of public schools, showing an annual expense of less than $8 per capita, with an enrollment of 2,525 pupils, under excellent discipline.

A flourishing college for girls and young ladies, with boarding accommodations, having an attendance of 150 scholars, is one of its brightest ornaments.

Nine comfortable buildings for church worship, with a seating capacity of 6,430, and a zealous, useful, industrious and intelligent ministry presiding over each.

Seventeen lodges, representing the various secret orders, all in a flourishing condition, and held together by the best people that lend nobility of character to southern citizenship.

A board of trade that numbers among its membership two hundred of the most thorough and progressive business men that can be found in any city in the south.

A mayor and city council, who have made a much reputation for wise legislation and industrious thrift since their induction into office, as any officials who ever served a prosperous people.

Encouraged and assisted by a press thoroughly progressive and indefatigable, whose chief desire seems to be the city's growth, and whose only aim their people's prosperity.

Upheld by a citizenry whose exalted character, lofty purpose and indomitable industry entitles them to the highest distinction and insures for them the greatest achievements and most phenomenal successes.

Such are a few of the many characteristics that distinguish Columbus over her competitors.

Can the record be beat? Is there a city in the south that can equal it? These questions are asked by the strong array of facts and figures presented above, and facts and figures alone must answer them.

If anyone supposes that Columbus is a city of unimportant resources, he has only to visit the place and investigate the magnitude of her manufacturing industries to be convinced of her greatness.

Every interest here is comprehensive and every advantage distinctive.

Her manufacturing interests are so varied and extensive that her reputation as an industrial center is pre-eminently established.

The distinctive advantages that crown the city with material success, are so numerous and far-reaching, as to give her a position of incomparable superiority.

Located at the head of navigation, on the Chattahoochee river, on the boundary line between Georgia and Alabama, the position of Columbus as a commercial point, is at once the Gulf of Mexico. By rail, she is 115 miles from Atlanta, the capital of Georgia, 100 miles from Macon, the capital of Georgia, 100 miles from Brunswick, on the Savannah and Atlantic coast, and 145 miles from Birmingham. Thus it will appear that her position is superior for controlling the trade of a large part of three states.

Georgia, Florida and Alabama, embracing a territory containing the richest agricultural, forest and mineral regions in the south.

MANUFACTURING INDUSTRIES. Columbus is distinctive for her manufacturing interests. These are more varied and comprehensive perhaps, than in any city of the same population in the south. This is accounted for by her unsurpassed natural advantages, she having besides excellent transportation facilities, a water power that is nothing less than wonderful. Her cotton manufacturing is her greatest industry, and these are distinguished for manufacturing the finest goods now on the market. It is said that she manufactures the finest gingham that is made in the south, the only mitcheline quilts, and her checks, tickings, etc., will compare favorably with any goods that are made in the world. There are ten cotton and woolen mills in Columbus, all running on full time and turning out the best work.

The Eagle and Phenix mills, located in the center of the city, on the Chattahoochee river, are the largest cotton and woolen mills south.

The capital and surplus of the company is $2,000,000, and the total invested in plant and quick capital is something over $3,000,000.

Since then, the company has been adding to its plant and quick capital. The number of operatives employed is 1,200, with an annual payroll of $380,000. The mills consume 15,000 bales of cotton and 150,000 pounds of wool per annum. The value of the products is $1,500,000 a year. The mills run 4,000 spindles and 1,000 looms, making a greater variety of goods than any similar mill in America, the products being colored and fancy goods in cotton, cotton warp yarns in woolen, sewing thread, rope and yarns.

The company owns the water power of the Chattahoochee river at Columbus, and cross that stream with two immense dams, which give a total water power in the lowest river stage of 4,000 or 5,000 horse power, which is increased during the fall and spring months to 10,000 horse power. The mills require about 3,000 horse power, all the machinery is driven by water wheels. In addition seven steam boilers, with a total capacity of 10,000 horse power, are used for dyeing and drying.

The company was organized just after the war with one mill, which was built in 1867. Since then, the company has been adding to its plant and quick capital. The company owns the water power of the Chattahoochee river at Columbus, and cross that stream with two immense dams, which give a total water power in the lowest river stage of 4,000 or 5,000 horse power, which is increased during the fall and spring months to 10,000 horse power. The mills require about 3,000 horse power, all the machinery is driven by water wheels. In addition seven steam boilers, with a total capacity of 10,000 horse power, are used for dyeing and drying.

The company was organized just after the war with one mill, which was built in 1867. Since then, the company has been adding to its plant and quick capital. The number of operatives employed is 1,200, with an annual payroll of $380,000. The mills consume 15,000 bales of cotton and 150,000 pounds of wool per annum. The value of the products is $1,500,000 a year. The mills run 4,000 spindles and 1,000 looms, making a greater variety of goods than any similar mill in America, the products being colored and fancy goods in cotton, cotton warp yarns in woolen, sewing thread, rope and yarns.

which may be said to be the eleventh cotton mill for Columbus, is a very important industry, conducted on business principles, and is producing a wonderfully profitable enterprise. The mill uses 150 machines and consumes 500,000 pounds of yarns a year. It employs 300 hands, and has a monthly payroll of $3,000. They own a patent for an automatic knitting machine, which is a very superior piece of mechanism. The mill is running on full time and is now three months behind with its orders. The company intends increasing the capacity of the mill soon. Under the thoughtful and conservative management of Mr. A. C. Young, president, and Mr. E. F. Colby, treasurer, the future success of the company is sure to be encouraging.

OTHER MANUFACTURERS. The Columbus Keweenaw company is an important industry, and the character of goods they manufacture being the best grades.

The Columbus steam bagging factory enjoys the distinction of being the only concern that turns out bagging in the state.

The Columbus iron and machine works will compare favorably with any shops in the south, both in character of work and extent of dimensions. As a specialty they manufacture the celebrated Stratton ice machine, the superiority of which is known over the world. These shops are operated by thorough business men; Mr. W. K. Brown, president, and Mr. George W. Ward, secretary and treasurer.

Golden's Foundry and Machine company is an incorporated concern, and gives employment to thirty hands. They are running on full time and will double their capacity at an early date. They do general repairing and jobbing work, and make a specialty of cane mills, cotton presses, hangers, shafting, pulleys and couplings.

The Empire mills is one of the most extensive flouring mills in the south, and make an excellent grade of goods.

The Columbus mill and machine works is fitted with the newest and most improved machinery, and has a capacity of 150 barrels a day. They make the best goods on the market, and have a large trade in Georgia, Florida and Alabama. Mr. M. M. Hirsch, president, and Mr. H. E. Hirsch, treasurer, are practical business men.

These works, which brick works are among the largest and best equipped brick yards in the south. In these works are three large yards, with a daily capacity of 100,000 bricks, and will double their capacity at an early date. They do general repairing and jobbing work, and make a specialty of cane mills, cotton presses, hangers, shafting, pulleys and couplings.

The Columbus Ice and Refrigerating company is well equipped with the best machinery and manufactures the purest little ice machine with which he makes the clearest ice. He also has complete bottling works.

The Muscogee Oil company, manufacturers of cotton seed oil, oil cake and meal, were organized in 1882, with a capital of $100,000. They have a well appointed plant with a capacity of 100 tons a day, and 3,500 gallons of oil a week. They employ 450 men with a weekly payroll of $100,000. Mr. O. O. Nelson is president, and he is ably assisted in the successful management of this mill by Mr. W. A. Peet, Jr., secretary and treasurer, who is a young man of first-class capacity.

A JUICY INVESTMENT

IT PAYS TO LEND MONEY TO A PEACH ORCHARD.

One Crop Will Pay Principal and Interest—Judge Cunningham Tells What Profit There Is in Peaches.

The juicy Georgia peach, which is so luscious that it keeps you wiping off your chin, has made several big fortunes and filled out the skeleton of many an emaciated pocketbook. "I would rather lend money to a peach orchard than put it out anywhere else," said Judge John D. Cunningham, president of the Georgia Fruit Growers' Society, when he got through telling why the crop could not have been killed. "A peach orchard is a good investment if it never makes but one crop. I would be satisfied with that, though, of course, I would not mind having a few more. One crop will pay for the land, the cultivation, the trees and everything else."

"What does it cost to make a peach orchard?"

"I am planting 10,000 trees in Cobb county, and will plant 20,000 more this fall. It will cost me about $1,000 to plant the 10,000, or about 10 cents a tree, in addition to the cost of the land, clearing and farming. In smaller lots it would cost more; a lot of 1,000 would probably cost 15 cents each."

"And what is a tree worth to you in a good crop year?"

"From fifty cents to a dollar each. There are about 150 trees to the acre."

By this time there were peaches in the air and a peach-blow tint on the horizon. I caught the odor of Elbertas and felt their fuc on my lips, but the judge continued.

"Yes," said he smiling, "I would rather lend money to a peach orchard than anything else. A man should not put his money in peaches unless he has no use for it for five years. If he has a surplus and wants to lend it out that is the best place I know. I put my surplus there."

"How many peach trees have you?"

"Near Griffin, thirty or forty thousand; then I have planted ten thousand in Cobb county. This fall I will plant twenty thousand more. My object in that is to extend the season. There is a demand later than I can supply from the peach orchards. By putting up to Cobb, I will get about two weeks extension of the time in ripening season and equally as fine fruit."

"I think the table land of Georgia, between Forsyth and Cartersville produces the finest peaches I ever saw. I have seen some very fine ones from the region between Adairsville and Missionary Ridge, but as a rule I do not think a limestone country will produce good peaches. There is something in the soil and climate of the middle Georgia granite region that give them superior flavor."

Patching a thoughtful moment he said:

"The trouble with some peach growers is that they dig a hole, put in a peach tree, cover it up and expect it to bear. They think they know all about peaches, but find themselves very much mistaken. I have been in the business since 1868, and I am continually learning. I suppose my son, who is interested with me, and has for years had the management of our large orchard, is the most expert orchard man in the state, and he tells me that he learns something about peaches almost every day."

"It takes six men to do my tree planting. One goes along and picks up the ground loosely, another follows and shovels the earth out, a third, with a long crowbar, breaks up the bottom and sides of the hole as deep as he can in every direction, a fourth, with a grubbing hoe, after putting in the hole about a pound of pure ground bone or high-grade acid phosphate, finishes breaking up the sides all round, and two more men come along with the tree, one shoveling out the dirt, and the other putting in the tree. Then the earth is sifted among the roots, and when the hole is full, you can hardly move the tree even before the dirt is packed, the earth being so well settled among the roots."

"Before the planting, I break up the ground five furrows on each side of the row, first with a two-horse turn-plow, then following with a subsoiler. That breaks the ground a foot or more deep, and the effect is almost the same as if it had been trenched."

"About transportation?"

"There is a great deal to say about that. Last year we had to pay a freight of $175 per car load to New York and then pay $100 to the Refrigerator Car company. There is that need of that if we could get all the ice we need. I can take a box car and make a good refrigerator out of it with $150, by tacking carpet lining to the sides, covering that with tongued and grooved planks, leaving an air space and sealing the inside. No patent, in my opinion, is worth a cent for preserving fruit, unless the car carries four tons of ice. My idea is to make an ice-box running down the middle of the car and rising to the roof, so the car can be cooled from the top. Of course the bottom and top of the car must be made non-conductors like the sides. A great trouble last year was that we could not get ice for love or money, when we most needed it."

"If we could get a fifty-five hour schedule to New York and Chicago we would not need any refrigerator cars; ventilators will do. The schedule the Richmond and Danville promised us last year would do, but it was not run regularly."

"What about other fruits?"

"I lost about $1,000 experimenting with pears, and about $1,000 experimenting with apples. I never lost any money on grapes."

A Chapter on Wine.

"What can be done with wine? Do you think Georgia can make it pay like peaches?"

"Wine in Georgia ferments and makes the drunk come. In my opinion the best wines of Europe come from the country where the vine and the Rhine and its tributaries flow. In their cellars wine is kept as cool, or cooler, than our spring water, and in that temperature it undergoes a slow fermentation for several years. The result is that there is very little alcohol in it. You may drink wine all day in Paris and not feel any more exhilaration than if you had taken a cup of tea. You may drink enough to make you sick, but not enough to make you drunk. Bring that wine to America and it will undergo a second fermentation, and the same quantity will make you drunk enough to fight. In Europe a man keeps his wine in a cellar; it does not remain in a warm place, and when a bottle is brought up it is so cool that you do not need any ice. That is the trouble about wine-making in this country. They say wine is adulterated, but the trouble is that it undergoes a second fermentation and generates a great deal of alcohol."

Turning to a map of the world, he said:

"What is the latitude of Georgia? Thirty at the Florida line. Say thirty-three for this locality. That line runs through Tripoli and northern Egypt in Africa. Now see what is the latitude of Paris. About fifty—the line which passes through New Foundland, in British America. Now you see the trouble is in the climate."

"I have thought a man might establish an immense wine press in the mountains of north Georgia, where the wine could be stored in those cool caves. The grapes could be grown in middle Georgia and shipped there, or the juice might be shipped there in refrigerator cars."

"Cellars might be dug in the hillsides of middle Georgia, and with a little aid from refrigeration the temperature could be kept right with very small expense. It would, in my opinion, require a temperature of about fifty-five degrees. On that plan a wine press in middle Georgia might be a success, provided the wine was not allowed to ferment again before using it."

"Wine then would not be a hurtful drink. In Europe they drink much more than we. In one city they drank very little water. I drank two glasses one night in Paris, and a friend was very much afraid it would make me sick. That accounts for it. In parts of Europe the water is bad—in some cities, they say, dangerous. Over here we have good water almost everywhere, and there is not so much need for wine."

"I have observed, though, that wine drinkers in Europe, as a rule, drink little strong liquor. A man does not rush up to a bar and gulp down his liquor, especially raw liquor. He sits down and pours an ordinary drink of brandy into a glass, fills it with water and sits there, talking and sipping."

"Here a man, I am told, may get beastly drunk on beer, but in London you may drink it all day and not be fazed. The Germans who drink beer like water in their own country, may get drunk on it when they come to America."

Reverting to peaches he said:

"The peach interest in Georgia is immense. It far outweighs all other fruit in importance and is rapidly increasing. I am very much interested in the extensive operations begun below Macon where, it is said, one company is planting 80,000 Elberta peach trees."

There will be a juicy time when the horticultural society meets this summer. Meantime the planting goes on.

Fine Havana Cigars

We have lately increased our facilities and are prepared to supply the constantly growing demand of our fine Havana cigars. Both our large Coronas and the small size Coronas challenge the finest brands imported from Cuba.

Smokers should bear in mind distinctly that no fine Havana cigar is fit to smoke unless it is made by hand. Having an experience of twenty years in the business we can say the Spanish method of making cigars by hand is perfect; in fact, it is an art in the highest sense of the word.

In making recently our annual purchase of Havana leaf tobacco, we took particular pains to select just such qualities of leaf suited especially for this market, namely: a thin silky leaf; rich in color, not too light or too dark; mild and sweet in taste, coupled with that brilliancy of fragrance which is an exclusive property of the very best Cuban leaf tobacco. There is nothing bitter about this genuine Vuelta Abaja leaf; it has not the slightest touch of rankness, and mark well, it does not make you dry in the throat when either does it bite your tongue when you smoke it.

Our cigars are for sale in all first-class drug stores, cigar stores, saloons and restaurants, and the trade is supplied from the factory at No. 2 Edgewood avenue, corner Peachtree street, by

There's a great difference in lamp-chimneys—depends on the glass. One pops whenever anything happens, sometimes when nothing happens. Another almost never breaks.

Lamp-chimneys are like segars—they cost so little apiece and so much by the year!—the breaking kind. The other sort is like the measles—once is enough.

Can you tell them apart? The unbreakable chimney has a "pearl-top." The makers, Macbeth & Co., Pittsburgh.

Comparisons and reflections.

We are hard tempted to give some symptomatic figures referring to our retail success. Floor space, people on the pay-roll, cost of advertising and other leading items by which the public might measure the store so familiar to them. But are you interested in such details—we think not—hence they are passed.

Another phase of the store.

Aside from the material organization is the mental—intellectual, of which the buying corps is by no means the least. Disciplined merchants, trained judges, are even now scouring Eastern markets for the things you will want to find when Spring comes.

Black Silks. Quality and price evenly balanced. There isn't a drooping or a lazy lot in the line. Every sort full of vigor and courage. We print a few of the kinds. You'll see our figures in other stores perhaps, but not in company with Silks of the same grade.

Black Satin, plain.

There are woven no choicer styles than we show. Each piece the pride of its maker.

Surah Tartans.

A flood-tide of plaided profligacy has swept through silken stuffs. These picturesque effects were given impetus by the marriage of Princess Louise with the Earle of Fife, who is of the Macduff clan. As a bit of appropriate sentiment, the Princess had several gowns in her wedding trousseau made of the Macduff Plaid, and lo! all the women of the United Kingdom went out to buy Macduff dresses until the ends of the earth were filled with weavers thereof.

Monday we exhibit the following Tartans in Surah:

The Gordon Plaids.
The Glen Gyle Plaids.
The Fergusson Plaids.

can have an intelligent admiration. However, sound principles of art are expressed in them, and they are certain to command your taste. Our variety cannot be beaten on either side of the sea. Price 98 cents.

Sensations in Silks are difficult, especially when the entire stock is new and perfect. But the very basis of our Silk business is a sensation. The completest gathering we ever had. Every legitimate facility created by great individual thought and care, and by thorough management is placed at the disposal of Keely Company's patrons. The assortment we display has never been equaled in the history of Atlanta. Not the per cent of profit, but the amount of trade brings the return of capital employed, labor bestowed, expense incurred.

There are fine Silks and rare—dainty, exquisite. The cheaper sorts too. Every yard is highly seasoned with a peculiar bargain condiment.

Rival beauties. Ctepe De Chine and China Silk. The first almost light as the air that stirs them. Graceful and pretty, and the beginning prices are surprisingly next to nothing. Soft, delicate tints that beautifully blend with the flower you are fondest of.

"I'm no sardine," said the Maine barrister; "but they put me in a box all the same, and give me a French name." Just so the snobs and charlatans, shams and quacks of the Silk industry in England, France and America have vainly tried to imitate India Dress Silks falsely so-called.

It is not right to rob the Chinaman and the Jap of the credit due their products by calling them Indias.

Don't be satisfied with the flimsy, make-believe stuff that many have on sale as the real.

Ours are genuine, they show the merits of honest work, strong and thin, with some magical quality in the fabric that gives the Mongolian printer a foundation for color and effect entirely unique.

The styles are plain and brilliant, with lots of sparkle, and various entomological and piscatorial designs, some truly artistic, others grotesque and ugly, but prized all the more therefor.

This is to be a happy season for Novelties. All the proper conditions have been and are here—particularly skill and elegance.

Is it not worth something to you that our Stuffs are "Exclusive"? The constant infusion of freshness in our Paris Robes keeps the stock ever bright and fair.

The establishment we govern is big, but you must remember that bigness retires before goodness here. Therefore our boast is less that we have the largest stock of Pattern Suits than that we have the best.

Woolen Goods. Some of the richest things for dresses that ever came to Georgia. The Mecca of materials, light and medium weight. Not a paltry spattering of stuffs, but a full, healthy, well rounded stock of the season's worthiest—the best for all needs.

Foreign looms have realized numerous novel thoughts that today dazzle with dyes and designs.

We could point to a hundred notables. They crop up all over the store; from the meek domestic to the self-important imported fabric. The quick buying should hasten your choice.

lustrous of all the springy kind. Tumble it about as you please, not a crinkle or a wrinkle. Travel in it. Where's the usual load of dust and cinders? Gone. They couldn't stick. Not a slow movement about them, still we touch some twenty bolts with the price-spur. That's our way.

Apart from the shortest lengths, it's generally the merest trifle that sends Dress Goods to the Remnant counter—color line broken more frequently than anything else. Just the shade you want, maybe, and a huge chunk of the cost gone because some color you don't want is missing! One of the absurdities of the business, but it makes glorious picking among the Remnants to your delight.

A careful study, a judicious analysis of Challis reveals a stock here that ought to be the envy of every dealer, the goal of every buyer.

Ginghams, Ginghams, Ginghams! A late and radiant rally that supplement and complement their predecessors.

This Scotch show will please you greatly to behold. The possible beauty into which tractable fabric is distorted are many, very many, and their astounding brilliancy are certainly deserving your observation. The wit of the Glasgow spinners was never so fully proven before.

Eighty styles of handsome stripes and plaids worth 25 cents for 15 cents. They heroically carry the flag of Gingham quality into the lowest price-camp such stuffs ever reached. These are a manufacturing as well as a trade triumph. Rhode Island is so close to the heels of Scotland that you look again and again before you know which is which.

Ombres.

A sort of a sublimated Sateen. They are here in glittering heaps like foamy billows, color-spattered with beauty shapes.

A majestic weave—the coronation of Cotton. You are amazed that cotton surfaces can be so finely calendered. But with irresistible progress the geni of the looms have produced a fabric from the staple fit to clothe a Cleopatra.

Hot weather Underwear is thick—est now. We have to be ready long before the sun begins to make folks sizzle. Experienced buyers keep ahead of the jam.

Ladies' Lisle thread Drawers. Heretofore most difficult to procure. Plentiful now; thanks to an unlooked-for happening. Price 50 cents. You'll marvel much at the superiority of the style when the cost is taken into account. All sorts of Summer vests, high and low neck, in delicate colors, and of whatever material Fashion has approved.

A Corset stock that is nearer to the top in every way than we ever before saw. There isn't a flaw to be found in the sorts we sell.

of the French woven and come flushed with early success. An other French woven Corset of sound material, fine bones and tempered steels. A wonderful achievement for 50 cents.

Here's a Corset that—well; wear it three weeks and bring it back and get your money again if it isn't what you want in every particular.

That is what you will hear in this store about one Corset—no other—Kabo.

It means that the Kabo Corset is right for nine women in ten.

It isn't an ebb and flow Hosiery stock—surging today and sinking tomorrow. All the year round it is full of just the kinds you are wanting. There are always spots in it where your money does unlooked-for buying. See these:

Ladies' regular made Balbriggan Hose, better than ever, 12½c.

Ladies' regular made Black Hose, double heel and toe, 15c.

Gents' regular made Balbriggan Half Hose, 15c.

Gents' British Half Hose, 15c.

Gents' fine seamless Black Half Hose, 25c.

Many other extra attractive things are all the time turning up in this department.

They say Glove prices will be advanced May 1. All right. We'll cross the bridge when we reach it. Meantime we clip the corners off the ruling—of the most desirable pairs for between-season's wear. We want to clear the stock of broken lots and odds and ends.

Ladies' fine Silk Gloves, pure dye; 50c.

Equal advantages make the Kid Glove counter unusually interesting. Yes, you may judge that stock by the same standard, and just as much to your surprise.

THE ATLANTA CAR COMPANY ORGANIZES.

The stockholders meet and elect a board of directors and a president—work to be commenced at once.

The stockholders of the Atlanta Car Company met yesterday for the purpose of organizing. In Mr. James H. Wylie's office, at the appointed hour the following gentlemen, representing 430 shares of stock, were present: Captain Lowry, Messrs. J. R. Wylie, T. C. Healey, J. C. Peck, C. A. Healey, Frank Peck, William Benson, A. T. Tripod, E. F. Gould and S. M. Inman.

In order that the meeting might get to work as quickly as possible, Captain Wylie was requested to act as chairman and Mr. C. A. Healey as secretary.

Captain Wylie stated that the first thing to be done would be the reading of the charter, which was recently granted by the superior court of Fulton county.

The document set forth that the object of the company is to manufacture, build, repair, improve, buy, own, sell and lease cars of all kinds for railroads, streets and tramways.

To do all kinds of work in iron and brass castings; to manufacture machinery and tools and repair the same; to establish shops, foundries, furnaces, works and all other conveniences for the above purposes; to buy, own, sell, lease and enjoy real estate, and to encumber its property by liens and otherwise, if necessary to the company of said business; to sue and be sued; to have and keep a common seal, and to alter the same at pleasure; to make and adopt by-laws, rules and regulations for the government of the corporation; to elect and appoint proper officers and agents to do any and all other things, and to have such powers as are usually granted to corporations for the full and complete exercise of the powers herein asked for.

The charter then stated that the principal place of business would be in Atlanta, and the capital stock was set at $50,000 with power to increase it to $250,000 whenever the directors of the company deem such action expedient.

Authority was given to begin business as soon as ten per cent of the capital stock was paid. The charter will run for ten years with the permission of having it renewed at the expiration of that time.

When the charter had been read, the secretary showed by his book that a much larger sum than the required ten per cent has already been paid. So there is no legal reason why the manufacturing of cars should not be begun at once.

Mr. Peck was asked by Captain Wylie if he had any remarks to make. He stated that in order to facilitate matters he had drawn up some by-laws which he would like to submit.

The by-laws provided for the election of a board of trustees, composed of six gentlemen who should be empowered to choose a president.

On the motion of Mr. E. F. Gould, the chairman of the meeting, was resolved that the two gentlemen, who, with himself, should select a board of directors and submit their names for the approval of the stockholders present. Mr. Wylie with Mr. Gould and Mr. Frank Peck left the room, and when they returned they submitted the following names, who were unanimously elected as directors.

Captain Evan P. Howell, T. G. Healey, J. F. Beck, C. A. Healey, J. C. Peck, R. J. Lowery and James B. Wylie. After the election the meeting of the stockholders was adjourned and the directors immediately met to elect a president. After only a few minutes' conversation the gentlemen unanimously elected Mr. J. C. Peck as president and Mr. J. F. Beck as vice president.

Considerable argument ensued on the best location for the works. After the meeting, Mr. Peck stated that several options were held by the company on pieces of land, and one of these would be purchased within the next few days.

It was also stated that inside of ten days the building of the factory would be commenced, sidetracks would be laid, and as soon as possible the carworks will be placed in operation.

THE GEORGIA CAR COMPANY.
A New Enterprise Which will Soon be in Operation.

Mr. Martin Ammons purchased yesterday morning a large tract of land for the Georgia Car Company.

The property consists of thirty acres and is situated at the Belt line junction. The purchase was made through Mr. Hugh Inn, and the price is said to have been $500 an acre.

The Georgia Car Company will be formed from the Georgia Lumber Company, and as soon as practicable works will be erected and operations begun.

A TERRIBLE TRAGEDY.
The Story Is Recalled by the Visit of a Gentleman to Atlanta.

A fine-looking, sturdy man of probably forty-five years of age, whose handsome face may be distinguished by the Napoleonic mustache and goatee which he wears, is one of the Kimball's guests.

This is Major C. F. Howes, of Boston. Major Howes was colonel of the Twelfth Massachusetts cavalry, and now is one of the proprietors of the great Hallett-Davis piano manufactory. He has come to Atlanta on business for his house.

A year or more ago, Major Howes met with an accident so terrible that the whole country was talking about it.

Major Howes, his wife and son were canoeing up the St. George river in Canada, on their way for a summer's camping out on their preserves. As they were paddling along one moonlight night, a shot from the shore startled them, and Mrs. Howes fell dead with a bullet through her temple. It was afterwards discovered that the shot was fired by half-breed who was in the bushes, and his companion, a paucous are now serving a thirty-year sentence in the penitentiary.

The terrible situation of the husband and the son can only be imagined. They had still eighty miles to go. With the body of the beloved wife and mother in their tender care, they kept on their journey until their strength was reached. Then they set out to find a murderer. They were found by the aid of the settlers in that region, and they are now paying the penalty for their action until next Tuesday at 4 o'clock, when another meeting will be held.

ACTION POSTPONED.
Many Plans Delayed by the Washouts, and Action Postponed Until Tuesday Next.

In compliance with the call issued by Chairman Northen, the committee in charge of the Grady monument met yesterday to consider the designs which have been submitted.

There were on hand a dozen beautiful plans hanging on the walls of the room which Mr. Northen has converted into an art gallery. So many designs, however, have been delayed by the washouts on the railroads that it was decided to postpone any action until next Tuesday at 4 o'clock, when another meeting will be held.

Three hundred houses have been built in Atlanta through the Atlanta Building and Loan Association, and the owners paid for them without ever which they can borrow money, and build a home and pay it back monthly. See Peter F. Clarke, secretary, at the Capital City bank.

THE GRADY HOSPITAL.

CHAIRMAN HIRSCH WILL OPEN THE SUBSCRIPTION BOOKS TOMORROW.

About $25,000 More Needed—The Work Will Be Pushed and the Hospital Built This Summer.

Tomorrow work begins in earnest with the Grady Hospital committee.

"And once begun in earnest," said Chairman Joe Hirsch yesterday, "we are not going to stop until the money needed is secured. The hospital will be built this summer, and will be an ornament to the city."

"How much have you to begin with?"

"The city gives $30,000. Besides this about $12,000 has been subscribed. Then we count upon getting the Benevolent Home, which we value at $10,000."

"Have you any idea of using the site of the Benevolent Home as the site for the hospital?"

"The committee has not made a recommendation yet as to the site, but they have no idea of using the Benevolent Home place. That property will be sold and a lot purchased further out."

"How much more is needed?"

"About $25,000."

"How are you going to raise it?"

"Private subscription—there won't be any trouble about that. The subscription books will be opened Monday, one at THE CONSTITUTION office and one at the Journal office."

"The committee will go to work at once, and the undertaking will be pushed altogether. I believe we can raise the $25,000 in two weeks. By that time the plans will all be ready, and inside of a month the hospital should be in actual course of construction."

"This is our monument to Mr. Grady, and we are going to have it in operation, a blessing to Atlanta, before the bronze monument is in place."

A meeting of the committee will be held Monday or Tuesday.

The subscription books will be opened Monday.

PARAGRAPHIC PENCILINGS.

I remember to have read some weeks ago a statement of Mr. Chauncey Depew to the effect that at a dinner party given by the present Lord Roseberry one of the guests not the distinguished host himself had ever heard of Daniel Webster. This statement is evidently apocryphal for the reason that Mr. Lord Roseberry many years ago spent some months in this country and during his stay was a frequent visitor to Washington city. During one of his visits he met Alexander H. Stephens. Mr. S. presented his lordship with a copy of his "War Between the States," which contains an elaborate account of the Webster-Hayne debate. Roseberry would hardly be talked of as the successor of Gladstone, nor could he have won the hand of a Rothschild, if he had been the dullard that Depew's statement makes him. After all, Depew is a brilliant person—only this and nothing more. A little more of Thomas Grady's devotion to facts would help Mr. Depew amazingly.

There is an elderly gentleman in this city that is distinguished for multifarious knowledge, who enjoyed the person and acquaintance of the Grady. On one occasion, possibly at a club house in London, he said to Mr. Thackeray, "Do you know that in Savannah, Georgia, we have a splendid excursion boat christened Becky Sharp." The author of Vanity Fair replied, with a mischievous twinkle of the eye, "If that be so, doctor, I am only answer that I shall be sorry to have to man her."

Folks who are weather wise have had much to say of the present mild winter, and its probable outcome. According to Sherwood's Georgia Gazetteer, published more than fifty years ago, the winter of 1888 was very much like the present one. During the months of December and January the thermometer all over Georgia ranged as high as seventy-four degrees, and seldom fell below fifty degrees. February and March, however, were unusually cold. Snow or sleet was a weekly occurrence, and the planting of crops was seriously hindered. This gazetteer is now a rare and costly volume, and was compiled by an eminent geologist.

Oliver Cromwell was impatient of shame. It was in keeping with his method, when he entered the house of commons, seized the speaker's name, turned out the Rump parliament, locked the door, put the key in his pocket and went about his business.

The historical English "Rump" was hardly a greater sham than the present house of representatives at Washington. Nearly three months will elapse before the body has a system of parliamentary rules for its government. Speaker Reed is determined with or without rules to throttle the democratic minority. For the time being it is smooth sailing, but a storm is brewing and the change of the political complexion of the house is well nigh inevitable. He will know how it feels when even-handed justice "commends the poisoned chalice to his own lips." Meanwhile the senatorial branch is confirming negro postmasters in the south and listening to the interminable harangue of that educational crank, Blair, of New Hampshire.

Uncle Jonathan Norcross, as he is affectionately called, seems indignant that anybody should question the infallibility of the war department in the matter of artesian wells. Perhaps he is right, but some of us choose to disagree. When it was first proposed to experiment with this matter our late informed scientists, including the state geologist McCutcheon and Professor Waite of the university predicted a signal failure. The result has satisfied their wisdom. From the beginning of artesian well has been a jest and a byword. After all the packing and patching it is still unsatisfactory.

Let us abandon the project of boring in a metropolitan formation for artesian water and let us, if practicable, take other steps to enlarge our water supply.

If Atlanta continues to develop we must bring this supply from the Chattahoochee. No man would expect it to be forthcoming as late as this to this complex it must come at last. Such piddling as we have had on this question is not to the credit of a wide-awake, progressive city.

One of the latest schemes for the solution of the metropolitan water problem is suggested by your correspondent, Walter Gregory. It strikes us that the thing needed is neither revision nor amendment to the existing federal constitution.

The several post-bellum amendments have been made to enlarge the franchise and to still further alienate the two sections which else "like kindred drops had mingled into one."

The permanent pacification of the country will be soonest attained not by constitutional revision but by returning to the Jeffersonian and Madisonian interpretation of that venerable instrument.

Let the incendiary politicians cease their babbling and the patriotism and good sense of the people will adjust the issue fairly and satisfactorily to both races.

During the administrations of Arthur and Cleveland we had an eight years respite from this vexatious issue.

Let a similar national policy be pursued by the present authorities at Washington, and we will have an end of these riots, rapes and lynchings which have followed the incoming of Harrison.

King's Daughters' Meeting.
The King's Daughters will meet Monday, March 3d, at 4 o'clock, p. m., at King's Daughters' Hospital.

Mrs. Wm. King, President.
JENNIE S. COLE, Secretary.

NOCTURNE.
The golden sun from sapphire skies Hath fallen, and the silvery moon doth rise, Most fitful and tender. Oh, see! She throws her star-gemmed silvery sheen O'er the sea, and the waters green That have the golden-hearted lilies, Sweetheart, come sing to me, And console me in my reverie.

Sing! for the flowers are sleeping now, And from the weeping-willow's bough There comes no pleading plaint; She shines so soft, my fair-haired saint, And a gold and silver alloy makes above thy brow.

O sing, and let thy flute-like voice Float o'er the lilies to yon blue sky, And make my weary soul rejoice, As it dies away in mystery.

THE ELEVENTH CENSUS.

SOME INTERESTING POINTS ABOUT HOW IT WILL BE TAKEN.

Supervisor Thibadeau Has a Word to Say to Would-be Enumerators—Facts of Interest About the Third Georgia District.

On the second day of June, the army of census enumerators will march forth to begin the work of taking the eleventh census of the United States of America.

A great work is this, and one of vast importance to the country.

How is it to be done? Is a question frequently asked. Of the general method of taking the census, the readers of THE CONSTITUTION have already been informed. There are some special features which are new to this particular census—special lines to which the supervisors will pay special attention—but so far as the mere enumeration of the people is concerned, the plan pursued will be practically the same as in the previous census.

The law covering this census is pronounced the most complete possible, covering every point upon which statistics will be either interesting or valuable.

"I have studied the matter pretty close," said Supervisor Thibadeau, of this district; "and I believe this census will be in every respect the most complete ever taken in this country. You know I have not as yet been confirmed, so I am able to give you nothing official; but from the press accounts of the law and of the plans of the work, I believe it could not possibly be improved upon."

"Have you had many applications for positions under you?"

"I suppose I have had three thousand. Fifty of these have been from ladies, but the law makes their appointment impossible."

Of Interest to Applicants.
Mr. Thibadeau was asked to furnish for publication some information concerning this, the third, district of Georgia. This information will be found in the following letter:

ATLANTA, GA., February 26, 1890.—Editors THE CONSTITUTION, Gentlemen: In compliance with your request that I furnish for publication through the columns of your paper information relative to the third census district, I have to say that the third census district of Georgia, as constituted, I learn, is composed of twenty counties. I have hastily prepared a district militia district lines, and perhaps some minor matters. The district has an area of about 6,784 square miles. The railroad mileage, exclusive of yard tracks, side tracks and street railroads, is 635 miles, and includes the names of thirteen railroads. All county sites are accessible by railroads; also a majority of other towns of note in the district. The mileage of water courses denominated rivers flowing through the district and in part forming its boundary lines, is about 550 miles.

There are of all classes 247 post offices, thirty-one of which are money-order offices and one free delivery office. According to the tenth census (1880) the district was credited with a population of 235,952. By adding to these figures a moderately estimated percentage of increase in the population for the ten years ending ending, will, in order to meet the requirements of law provided for taking the eleventh census, justify the supervisor in appointing eighty-two (82) field men, denominated enumerators. Should the appointment of this number be permitted by the department at Washington, they (the enumerators) will be apportioned among the counties of the district as follows: Butts two (2), Campbell three (3), Carroll four (4), Clayton two (2), Coweta five (5), Douglas two (2), DeKalb four (4), Fulton (10), Fayette two (2), Gwinnett five (5), Henry four (4), Jackson four (4), Jasper three (3), Morgan four (4), Newton four (4), Oconee two (2), Putnam four (4), Rockdale two (2), Spalding three (3), Walton four (4). Counties will be subdivided into enumerating divisions without regard to established militia district lines, each to be equal as to number of inhabitants, or as nearly so as the supervisor may be able to make them. Applications for appointment to position of enumerator should be in writing, addressed to the supervisor of census, third district of Georgia, Atlanta, Georgia. The applicant must be a citizen of and reside in the county to which he asks appointment. He should state his age, occupation and postoffice address, and have the endorsement of responsible citizens, as to his moral character, habits of sobriety and special fitness for the work. All applications must be signed with the full name of the applicant, and those not in the handwriting of the applicant will not be considered by the supervisor. Ladies will not be appointed to position of enumerator. Commissions to enumerators will be issued about April 15th, possibly later.

A national census is a matter which concerns all classes of people, not alone in the enumeration of inhabitants, but in all special lines of inquiry. Accurate results only can be of value and interest to the citizens of a country. Trusting to receive material assistance from the citizens generally throughout the district, a judicious selection of assistants, coupled with his personal attention to every detail of the work, the supervisor hopes to be enabled to forward to the department at Washington reports acceptable in every essential particular, creditable to the district as well as to all who may have been engaged in the work.

JOSEPH H. THIBADEAU, Supervisor.

Some Interesting Figures.
"That," said Mr. Thibadeau, referring to his letter, "contains about all that I can give you. I have made, I state there, some calculations of the area of the district, the mileage of the railroads. Here are the figures in detail."

The calculation of the area in square miles of each county is given here. It shows that Clayton is the smallest of the twenty counties composing this district, and that Carroll is the largest. The figures are: Butts, 200; Campbell, 242; Carroll, 612; Clayton, 128; Coweta, 410; DeKalb, 311; Douglas, 128; Fayette, 273; Fulton, 175; Gwinnett, 578; Henry, 402; Jackson, 482; Jasper, 465; Morgan, 362; Newton, 300; Oconee, 176; Putnam, 312; Rockdale, 140; Spalding, 230; Walton, 410. Total, 6,784.

The table showing the mileage of railroads in the third census district, exclusive of side tracks and street railroads is:

A. & P. Atlanta to Monroe county line, 42
A. & W. F. Atlanta to Cobb county line, 42
Central, Atlanta to Pike county line, 60
Central, Easton to Baldwin county line, 10
C. & D. Carrollton to Haralson, 8
C. & M. Jones county line to Clarke county line, 68
Georgia, Atlanta to Cobb county line, 40
Georgia (G. & S. division), Social circle to Hall county line, 40
Hall county line, 40
G. M. & G. McDonough to Pike county line, 25
G. P. Atlanta to Cobb county line, 42
G. P. south side Cobb county line to Haralson county line, 26
E. T. Y. & G. Atlanta to Jackson county line, 21
R. & D. Atlanta to Hall county line, 40
R. & D. (Dowell branch) from Social circle to county line, 10
R. & D. (Lawrenceville branch), Suwanee to Lawrenceville, 9
G. P. belt line, 4
S. G. & N. A. Griffin to Carrollton, 60
W. & A. Atlanta to Cobb county line, 42

Total, 635 miles.

"Now I don't know what you can give me," said Mr. Thibadeau. "As I said I can give nothing official. You readers have doubtless kept posted upon the discussion over the census bill and know of the special lines which will be interesting and instructive features of this census. Take, for instance, the recorded indebtedness of the country; the industries of the country; the division of the negro, mulatto, quadroon and octoroon; and a number of others that I might mention. These features will be covered by special men. Whether these men will be appointed by the supervisor or by the interior department has not yet been determined, but their work will be carried on without any reference to the work of the regular enumerators."

"How much are the enumerators to be paid?"

"That will be determined by the interior department. There are three classes: those who work in cities of over ten thousand inhabitants; those who work in towns and villages; and those who work in country districts. They will be regulated with a view to paying equal wages for equal work, and in the division of the work the aim is to give the enumerators the same amount of work. The division of a county, for instance, is not made according to area or existing lines, but is made with a view to giving each enumerator as much population as the others."

"And your appointments?"

"My appointments will be made without any reference to politics. The census is of importance to all persons, and times for the work will be only consideration in making the appointments. We want good, sober, industrious men—men who will be specially fitted for the work. The only distinction that the law recognizes is, that all things else being equal, old soldiers and sailors shall be given the preference."

"When do you begin your work?"

"You forget that my appointment hasn't been confirmed. Until it is I cannot talk officially."

But of course the appointment will be confirmed at once. It is an excellent one, and the people of the third district may be sure that the census will be fairly, honestly, thoroughly taken.

DEDICATING A CHURCH.
Bishop Hendrix Mission to Be the Scene of Interesting Exercises.

Appropriate services will be held for the occasion, beginning with a Sunday-school jubilee, by the Mission Sunday-school, at 9 o'clock this morning. Several other Sunday-schools will also take part in the exercises. The Sunday-school jubilee will be held in the morning, and the exercises will be held in the afternoon.

Bishop Hendrix mission was founded four years ago as a Sunday-school. From this Sunday-school the church has gradually sprung, and now, forty-four years ago, the building which is to be dedicated today was begun. Much of the work of the building was done by the hand of its pastor, Rev. Marcus D. Smith. Since its founding, Captain E. M. Roberts has been the stanch and devoted friend of the mission, working heart and soul for its success.

At 1 o'clock Rev. John N. Bowden, of Senoia, who preached the first sermon ever preached at the mission, will preach the dedication sermon. He will take the same text taken at that first sermon, Hebrews, xii: 1-2.

Baptism of infants will take place at this service.

Rev. Marcus D. Smith, the pastor of the church, will lecture at 2 o'clock, in the afternoon, and will deliver the sacrament of the Lord's supper, which will be observed.

All the services will be held in the little church which will be crowded during the day.

THE BROSIUS DIRECTORS.
Held a Meeting Yesterday and Ratified the Deal Made.

The directors of the Brosius Motor company held a business meeting yesterday.

Telegrams were read announcing the terms of the deal in New York exactly as given in yesterday's CONSTITUTION.

General satisfaction was expressed, and the stockholders undoubtedly will ratify the trade in detail.

It is expected that the first machines will be in the market by the first of April. A lot of twenty-four are now being prepared, and will be ready, it is stated, by that time.

"Captain Swift." Mr. Chauncey Pulsifer, business manager of the "Captain Swift" company, was in town yesterday to arrange for the appearance of the company at the Atlanta Fair, which opens Monday, March 10th, of its attraction.

"Captain Swift" is the companion play of "Jim, the Funman," and is sent on the road with an exquisite cast from the Madison Square theater by Mr. A. M. Palmer, the manager of this celebrated theater. Among the artists are Mr. Arthur Forrest, Miss Rosa Rand, Wright Huntington and Miss Kimball.

Berean church—Rev. L. C. Partridge, pastor. Preaching at 11 a. m. and 7 p. m. Sunday school at 3 p. m. J. F. Robie, superintendent. Christian Endeavor at 6:30 p. m. Mrs. H. S. Caldwell will speak at 2 o'clock to the Sunday-school.

Evangelistic Bible class this afternoon led by the railroad secretary. Everybody invited. On Thursday, March 6th, Dr. R. S. Barrett delivers his new lecture, "Life on the Ocean Wave." A large attendance is confidently anticipated.

THE CLAYTON MOTOR.

A USEFUL MACHINE ON EXHIBITION AT RICH'S STORE.

Five Hundred Men Will Soon Be Making 1,000 Motors a Day—What the Experts and Doctors Say About It.

Mr. R. C. H. have on exhibition at their store a machine which is destined to be a great benefit to thousands.

The machine is a model of the Clayton motor, and hundreds of people have called to see it work. It is the only motor yet invented which can be attached to any sewing machine.

An expert tool maker is now on his way to Atlanta to make special tools which are needed to construct the motor, and in the course of six months 500 men will be employed in turning out 1,000 motors a day.

That a demand will exist for all that can be made cannot be doubted, as the saving of labor is immense. The movement is regulated by a treadle, and any machine can be made to take 5,000 stitches a minute, or the stitches can be made so slowly that they can be counted.

Mr. F. H. Strickly, who has been in the sewing machine business in Nashville, Tenn., for many years, says:

I have examined with much care and interest your Clayton sewing machine motor, and have had it running a sewing machine in my office for near two weeks, and after several trials, I am gratified to say that it is a perfect success, enabling the operator on the machine to sew indefinitely long without the use of any treadle, steam, water or electricity. I am constrained to give your spring motor my emphatic endorsement for several plain reasons, viz:

1. It is absolutely safe, light, and easily, in thirty seconds, attached to any machine.

2. It is cheaper by far than water, steam or electric motors, the cost of which runs on night and day, while of this it ends with the purchase.

3. It is simple, and being connected without any effort or fatigue.

4. Any woman can in thirty seconds attach it to any sewing machine and commence operating the machine.

5. It does away with the necessity or the use of the treadle and its bad effects.

6. The speed and stopping of the motor are under the complete, easy and instant control of the operator.

7. It will enable me to sell many machines to ladies who cannot use the treadle on account of its bad effects, and it will not do so.

8. It will increase the sale of all machines.

9. In winter the machine can, with this motor, be operated and the feet kept warm by the fire.

10. It is light, adding but little to the weight of the machine, making it easy to be moved to any part of the house for comfort, light or convenience.

Mr. J. R. Houdin, an expert machinist and builder of motors, having constructed the model of the Clayton motor, says that its mechanism is perfect and at the same time simple. Its simplicity and being connected entirely of metal, insures its durability, there being nothing to get out of order. It will last many years, and will undoubtedly become indispensable in every household as soon as its merits become known.

R. D. Bellamy, president of the Atlanta Wagon company, says, that being familiar with the motor, and having seen it in operation, he has no hesitation in asserting that the combination and simplicity of its parts are remarkable. It is effective, and will not do so.

It has always been a wonder to me that Yankee ingenuity has not long since devised some contrivance to propel sewing machines, thereby saving the health of the women. The success of the Clayton motor is assured because of its necessity.

From my observation of the various causes of female diseases, I have no hesitation in asserting that one of the most prolific is the exertion required to run a sewing machine. The inventor who can produce a contrivance for furnishing the motor force, and thereby saving the health of the women, and troubles incident to this part of their domestic duties, should certainly be not only entitled to their patronage, but their gratitude as well.

In inspection of the Clayton sewing machine motor, I feel safe in recommending it as an efficient and convenient contrivance for the purpose intended, and believe that it will go far toward lessening the increase of diseases peculiar to women.

AN ALLIANCE PROTEST

AGAINST THE PROSTITUTION OF THE ORDER

BY MEN WHO HAVE JOINED IT.
To Further the Interests of Candidates for Political Preferment—The Order Will Stick to Its Original Purpose.

DECATUR, Ga., March 1.—[Special.]—At a called meeting of DeKalb County Alliance held here to-day, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, The alliance movement is not designed to advance the interest of one man, or of a few men, but of doing the greatest good to the greatest number: and whereas, it is not a political organization, after the "loaves and fishes of office" and the "spells," but grander, nobler and higher in its aims and purposes, with the motto flying at its mast head "principles not men," but men with principles in unison with ours.

Resolved, That while there is no inhibition on the members of the alliance from running for or accepting any office, either civil or military, or citizens, we unhesitatingly condemn the idea that any officer of the alliance can use that office to the advancing of his private political ends and his candidacy for any office from bailiff to governor; that we draw the line between a man bearing aloft the alliance banner as its chosen champion for the advancement of its principles, and one simply using the alliance as a stepping stone to some other end.

Resolved, That we condemn any such practice and deprecate any such action tending to corrupt and degrade our movement.

Resolved, That we favor them running on their merits and their fidelity to principle, and a pure and honest ballot, and that we favor disfranchising any man who would buy or sell a vote.

CHARLES DICKENS'S SON.

The Miserable Death of a Clever Outcast—Punches and Roulette.

From the Chicago Herald.

Christmas day, 1887, was bright, sharp and sunny—in Chicago, at all events. It fell on a Sunday.

About 10 o'clock a fine looking man drove up in a cab, sent in his luggage and registered as F. Dickens. He was a slight, well-knit fellow of medium height—up to 5 feet 10—and turning the scale at 150 pounds. His brownish-red hair was short cut; he wore red chin-whiskers; his eyes were grayish blue, and were peculiarly bright.

Frances Goeffrey Dickens at 46 looked much as his father did at the same age; a trifle smaller, perhaps, and lighter in complexion.

When one is in Chicago one does as the Chicagoans should not do. Perhaps she does as they do not do. It is a city of churches, but churches do not satisfy all the aspirations of one who is infected with Fleet street microbe. Frank Dickens looked for other amusements and found them. One usually can find them. Punches are brewed the world over; the roulette wheel rolls in Chicago with the same old

And $5,000 is a very small sum of money anyway. It is hard to get, as poor Tom Hood said, but harder to hold.

One bleak January day Frank Dickens woke up "broke." Cleanliness may be next to godliness, but a man feels anything but godly when he "cleaned out." Dickens lay in bed and meditated. He rang for ice-water.

stand out; sounds that no music can equal. Of these the pleasantest is the rattle of the ice in the jug as the bell-boy comes down the corridor toward the room on a dull, feverish morning. It is an inspiration—almost a religion.

It spurred Dickens on the sensible plan of going to London.

Why not?

There were sisters and brothers there; a home circle; old friends and good companions. There one might start on a life of sobriety, propriety and domesticity. The idea was fascinating. Virtue, oddly enough, always is fascinating—in the morning. •

And then, of course, the question arose of the means of carrying out this wise and moral resolution.

Luck takes care of the victims of Fleet street. Heron, his old body servant, with shifty business sense had saved his money and come to Chicago. He opened a restaurant on West Madison street, near Union street. Many people know it; it is on the north side of the street. Dickens went to him. At that time he had a very handsome watch—given him by old comrades who had gone through

"Yes, I've thrown up my commission. I'm going home, Heron, home."

BROKE! IN A CHICAGO GAMBLING HELL!

Dickens came over to Clark street. As he rode over he debated the situation. One can hardly travel from Chicago to London on $200 a day in the way that one wishes to travel.

Clark street gives one peculiar ideas. The economic pendulum oscillates between picturesque poverty and opulent riot. There is no middle course. If one has $200 one can hardly be expected to "go steerage"—as Bayard Taylor and Robert Louis Stevenson and other poets have done. But, again, it is not enough in the other case.

There is a gambling saloon on Clark street, near Madison street. Some day it may be closed up. Mayor Crozier says it is closed

Dickens went there and watched the roulette wheel roll. He didn't make $1,000—he lost his $200. Then he went out and pawned his rings. For two days he drifted about the city, drinking here and there. He met a number of very dear friends of his—whom he had never seen before. One meets dear old friends of this sort now and again—when one has money.

He got out at Moline, Ill.

From Fleet street to Moline. There is a three-volume novel in those five words. And the characters that ramble through it are Dick Twiveller—with "the sun in his eyes"—and Lord Hawk and Pike, and Mark Tapley and Sgt. George, and one knows what not. And the hero, of course, of this putative three-volume novel, that takes its start at Devonshire terrace and ends in Moline, is DEAD IN A STREET OF MOLINE.

He died in Moline. Not in a hotel; not even a Moline lodging house. He wandered out to the shabby outskirts, stumbling through the rough streets and along the ramshackle sidewalks. There was an icy rain blowing down from the north, and when he fell he did not get up again. He lay there and died—open exposure, from what you please. He is buried in the unkempt little cemetery of Ma-

Chicago in 1888, giving readings from his father's works. He visited that neglected grave and now a modest stone tells, as far as names and dates can tell, the story of the life and death of Francis Geoffrey Dickens. This is the notice that appeared in the London Times and other English papers:
DICKENS.—Francis Geoffrey, died suddenly of heart disease, in Moline, U. S. A., February 4, 1887.

But as far as I know good every one has been later.

COLDEST DAY OF THE YEAR

Booming—A Few Points About It.
 "Well, doctor, am glad to see you. Would like to hear again from Peachtree Park. How is it progressing?"
 "Slowly, but surely. We are very much encouraged, and are confident that we are soon to have a most desirable rural village."

"Better than was anticipated by many. I stated in our last interview that the school would open on the 1st of March, and I am able now to state that it will open on Monday, the 3d instant. The trustees have elected a competent teacher, and a paying school is already assured for ten months. Pupils will be taught from the alphabet to a de-free of advancement that will fit them to enter the sophomore class in our colleges. Military tactics will also be taught, so that our boys, if they do not all become generals, will at least be instructed in the principles of the tactics, and an eye will be had to the improvement of their figures, giving them erect and manly forms, and fitting them for presenting to the world the grace and deportment of polite and finished gentlemen."

"Will the Bible be recognized in your school?"

"Yes, sir. The pupils will be required to commit to memory one or more verses daily, yet without showing any bias for any particular denomination. Nothing sectarian will be allowed taught or discussed. The school will be opened with prayer every morning.

Q Do you expect to receive pupils from a distance?

A We are having an eye to this. There are already ten residence houses in sight of the academy, from a few yards to a few hundred yards distant, and a number of cottages in a short while, so that it will be no great matter to get pupils from a distance. We are going to go to school in this healthful locality.

With good teaching, and good bracing atmosphere, we will be able to give our pupils all the advantages we would want for our own children. We would seem that pupils from a distance could not but be benefited by the advantages of the academy.

As to church privileges, I can state that a Methodist parsonage has been erected, near the academy, and will be moved to an adjoining lot, now two miles distant; will be moved to an adjoining lot, now two miles distant.

I can say, also, that a Baptist church has been organized, and we have reason to believe a Baptist church will be organized in the near future. We can also speak of establishing a church at this point, and we are doing so.

With it, indeed, our object to build up a village here free from demoralizing influences, and to give to the people a better education, more refined and good people."

Q Just say, doctor, the outlook?

A Indeed, and that many families will avail themselves of the advantages of the academy.

"ARISE AND WALK"

"Arise and walk; and immediately he arose, took up his bed and went forth before them all."

Most forcibly were spectators who attended Dr. Evans's lectures in Centennial hall last week, reminded of this passage in the Holy Scriptures, as they saw one after another of the lame, halt, and blind, seek the powerful aid and mighty touch of his great healer. What his power is, perhaps, cannot be satisfactorily explained; but those who were present saw the strange and wonderful workings now related: "A gentleman went upon the stage who had been quite deaf for fifteen years, and in less than three minutes, under the wonderful touch of Dr. Evans, he was able to hear the faintest whisper.

An old lady, who was so lame that she had to be carried up the stairs, was cured in five minutes, and walked away as nimbly as a girl.

The sensation was so agreeable that the cure of a young man, who had been badly paralyzed by the stroke of a lightning bolt, was had in half an hour. In ten minutes after the doctor commenced treating him he could use his arm and limb almost as well as he ever could.

A gentleman who stated that he had suffered from sciatic rheumatism for two years most insistently begged to be cured, and went away rejoicing.

Many similar cases of Lameeness, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Lumbago, etc., were so cured each morning. Dr. Evans will occupy nights of Honor hall in the future, where he can advise every one to attend and witness this wonderful man's power to cure disease, for he will certainly astonish you.

In connection with his wonderful magnetic gift of healing, Dr. Evans makes a specialty of official urgery, and the treatment of all diseases of the organs, such as the rectum, etc. In these diseases his treatment is entirely new and specific, and is invigorated by the use of the "Platt, of Chicago," Professor, of St. Louis, and Professor, of New York; Professor Morrow, New York, and all the specialists of the age in this line of diseases.

Dr. Evans also cures Cancer in less time and with less pain than by any other method known. He cures all Female Complaints without the use of instruments or exposure of person. He cures Syphilis, Fistula, Stricture, and Ulceration of the vessels without the use of the knife, or other violent treatment; and he challenges the world to cure Cancer, Syphilis, Stricture, and Ulceration without pain to the patient, or detention of the business. Dr. Evans, among hosts of others of national renown, is induced, by such men as the

Dr. N. B. Cole, M. C., St. Louis; Hon. N. B. Allen, Hon. J. G. Morgan, General Edwards, ex-state treasurer Missouri; Ex-United States Senator John A. McPherson, ex-United States Senator John H. R. Burton, ex-United States Senator John S. Love, ex-United States Senator John S. Love; Louis R. Silver, pastor High Street Presbyterian church, St. Louis, and scores of others in every part of the country where he is practiced. Dr. Evans has changed the place of holding his free lectures and public treatments from the Central Hotel to the Knights of Honor northeast corner Broad and Alabama streets, where he will continue to lecture and heal the sick, free of charge, every morning this week. Admission to the hall free. Consultation at his office, 1011½ Forestry, corner Broad and Third streets, and at his home, 1011½ Forestry. Dr. Evans is a married physician, and we especially advise those who are suffering from old chronic difficulties to go, for his success in all such cases is certainly very remarkable. The lecture will be held at the Knights of Honor Hall, northeast corner Broad and Alabama Broad streets every morning this week, from 10 to 11 o'clock each morning. Remember Dr. Evans commences his lecture at 10 a.

MR. D'GIVE REPLIES

TO ALL THAT HAS BEEN SAID ABOUT THAT SALE.

He Writes a Card and Furnishes Some Letters and Affidavits That Will Be Read With Interest.

EDITORS CONSTITUTION: For nearly a week I have allowed some prejudiced or misinformed persons to assail me in the papers, or in public, on account of the sale at auction of the seats of the Jefferson-Florence performance. Feeling confident that men of good sense would render me full justice, and that a little reflection would soon change the first impression of parties who, not acquainted with me and my record of thirty years in this community, had allowed their mind to judge without sufficient light before them. From everywhere I receive now the proof that I did not rely in vain upon the great pleasure to reproduce here the following letter from a gentleman who, these late days, had been only a street acquaintance for me.

MR. STOCKELL'S LETTER.
ATLANTA, Ga., February 27th, 1890. L. DeGivé, Atlanta, Ga.—Dear Sir: I have noticed several communications in the daily papers criticizing your action in placing the tickets of the Jefferson-Florence combination on sale at auction, and with the sincere feeling that all of these articles have done you a great injustice, I desire to submit the following as a reply to all that has been said. In the first place, you made a proposition in the papers to place the tickets for the entire house in the hands of a committee of citizens for them to dispose of in any manner they saw fit, that would avoid speculation. This proposition was not accepted, nor was it considered by any one that I have been able to hear of yet. So that the only thing to do was to try the experiment of selling them at auction. This you did, and if there is any dissatisfaction at all as to the result of that sale, the people who bid against each other for the tickets should take all blame, if any there is, upon themselves. They were not compelled to go to the opera house to buy the tickets in the first place, and after they got there they were not compelled to pay any more than they wanted. Any one who will view the matter of the sale from a dispassionate business standpoint, must admit that the tickets were sold at a price which was the voluntary act of the purchaser. I am not of great opinion of the people who did not attend the auction because they felt that parties who would be asked to pay more for tickets than they were willing to pay, and this is all right. I desire to go on record in the expression of the opinion that I believe you were not only not interested in the tickets being purchased by parties for the purpose of speculation, but that you were not even aware of anything of the kind going on. All this I write in an honest endeavor to dispel any wrong impression that may have been formed by our people in connection with the articles referred to in the first part of this communication. One communication suggested that the premium on the tickets resulting from the auction sale, be refunded to the purchasers, and in this connection I would say that such a proposition, does not come with good grace, in my opinion, and I would hate to see anything of that kind done. It is not the proper spirit for a city like Atlanta, and I regret that any one should seriously consider it. The people of Atlanta are abundantly able to take care of themselves, individually and collectively, and they are not right to do whatever they please with their money, pay what they please for theater tickets under any and all circumstances. Induce an alibi has been made about the proposed Masonic temple having an opera house in its building, and as a member of the Masonic temple committee I desire to say that such an idea has never been spoken of in the committee, nor do I believe that they, as business men, ever seriously consider such a suggestion. Whoever gave this information, or suggested it, had no authority whatever from the committee who has in charge the erection of the temple. You can publish such portions of this article as you may see fit, and if it will do you any good, you can use my name as the author. Yours truly, H. C. STOCKELL.

I can render the reasoning of Mr. Stockell still more striking in affirming that my patrons could have been all provided at that sale with seats at par if they had kept quite cool, and not bid against one another in the manner they did. As to the premises and dress circle only 300 tickets were sold at a price of 40 cents to $1.75, the highest. Thirty-four were sold at five to twenty-five cents premium, the balance at par. When the sale closed, nobody wanting any, even at par, there remained unused 133 seats on the first floor, or more than one-fourth of the amount which had been offered for sale at the auction. The affidavit of Mr. Fred Allen, who kept the book of the sale for me, and has this book in his possession, will establish these facts. During the sale I notified the persons around me two or three times that there were still several hundred seats, and therefore that everybody could be supplied. If there was an "outrage" committed by some one that day, it was committed by the unwise bidding of the crowd.

Somebody has said that the ushers of the opera house were there, bidding to raise the premiums. To that accusation, I will answer squarely that, if that person knows my ushers, he told willfully an infamous falsehood, and that, if he does not know them, he told a lie. The most severe censure for uttering such an accusation before ascertaining its truth. The annexed affidavit of my chief usher, Mr. Thomas Cooper, shows plainly that no such thing had been done.

I feel deeply mortified that after a residence of thirty years, and of irreproachable conduct in Atlanta, with a fortune rather exaggerated than attenuated, I should have been suspected and accused of such a mean practice, of trying to extort from my fellow citizens $61.65, my share in the premiums realized! So little did I care for that paltry sum, that, as soon as I realized that this auction method was distasteful to my patrons, although I had the right uncontestedly to use it, if I so choose, I resolved to give my share to the public institutions of our city, and to ask Mr. Jefferson to do the same, as soon as he arrived; and that he told me that he did not want the money under such circumstances. I proposed to him that the equal division between the Grady hospital, the Woman's Industrial home, and the St. Joseph hospital. The annexed attestation of Mr. Smith Clayton, who was present at the conversation, will sustain me and show how and why the division was made otherwise.

I hope that I will have fully demonstrated to the most prejudiced mind that I have been wrongfully treated by him and by the press who reproduced the accusations without even asking if there was any shadow of probability in them. In a Christian charity, I ought to have given the benefit of the doubt and of good intention, and after proof that I had made a mistake, asked to come back to the old method, so dear to the spectators.

Some of my young friends, who have a superabundance of capital, have announced their intention to punish me of my errors in building another theater. Gentleman, you cannot find a better way of getting rid of your surplus than by doing the right to do it, that I had to auction the seats. But I am certain, that, like me, you will find that you had better have abstained from it. One theater in Atlanta is a passable investment; two theaters will be "rot," as say the street Arabs. You can easily ascertain the truth by inquiring in the cities where such thing has been done. If, however, you want only to build a monument for glory's sake alone, I will venture a suggestion that might add new lustre to your name. There are all around us cities who had the good fortune to possess such disinterested citizens as you seem to be, and you will find there one and sometimes two theaters that you can buy at your own price, for what you would offer, the present owners being sick of them and acquired "experience."

THE AFFIDAVIT.
State of Georgia, Fulton county—Before me appeared Mr. Fred Allen, who, on oath says that he kept the book at the sale of tickets for the Jefferson-Florence performance, on which he entered every name as given to me by the purchaser, the number of tickets bought and the premium on each, and which book remained in my possession and is still in my possession, and that the total amount of premium paid on said tickets amounted to four hundred and twenty-one and twenty-one hundredths dollars, and that the amount of expenses at the auction was ten and ten hundredths dollars, leaving for net proceeds four hundred and eleven and eleven hundredths dollars, of which Mr. Jefferson's eighty-five per cent amounted to three hundred and forty-nine and forty-five one hundredths dollars, and Mr. L. DeGivé's fifteen per cent amounts to sixty-one and sixty-five one hundredths dollars; and after the sale was closed there remained unsold on the first floor one hundred and fifty-three tickets, not counting one hundred and one ticket put aside for the Masons.

FRED L. ALLEN,
H. F. LEAR, Notary Public, Fulton county, Ga.
FROM MR. COOPER.
State of Georgia, Fulton county: Before me appeared Thomas J. Cooper, who, being duly sworn, said that he is chief usher at the opera house, and employs all the ushers; that the day of the auction sale of the Jefferson-Florence tickets he was present from the beginning to the end, near the table where tickets were sold, and by the auctioneer; that during the whole sale he did not see a single usher of the opera house in the crowd; that for himself, he did not bid a single time during the sale, did not buy one single ticket; that he defies any one to say that he did bid or buy, or that any of his ushers did by-bid, as the thing would be a falsehood. Atlanta, Ga., March 1, 1890.
Thomas J. Cooper,
Chief Usher.
Notary Public.

FROM MR. CLAYTON.
I was in the office of the opera house when the question of disposing of the premiums obtained at the auction sale of the Jefferson-Florence tickets, and I heard the whole conversation between Mr. Jefferson and Mr. DeGivé.

Mr. DeGivé suggested that the money be divided equally between three institutions of charity and named to Mr. Jefferson Grady Hospital, Woman's Industrial Home and St. Joseph Hospital. Mr. Jefferson accepted the proposition for the first two, but not for the third, which is sectarian. Mr. DeGivé then said that his share alone, of fifteen per cent, would go to the St. Joseph Hospital.

SMITH CLAYTON.
State of Georgia, Fulton County—Before me appeared George H. Pratt, who, being duly sworn, said that he was the auctioneer who made the sale of the Jefferson-Florence tickets at the opera house; that he had no persons there to by-bid, was not asked to have any, did not see anybody do it during the sale, and received no bid from Thomas J. Cooper, the chief usher at the opera house, there present; that Mr. DeGivé never asked him to obtain the highest bids possible, but said only that he wanted him to sell the tickets.

GEORGE H. PRATT.

Mr. DeGivé: I remember that you told me before the sale that perhaps the seats would not bring more than twenty-five or fifty cents premium, but to sell them any way.

HIS FAVORITE POEM.

Mr. Alex Hopkins's Great Love of Poetry and Music, Which Ended Only With His Life.

Mr. Alex Hopkins, whose untimely death caused such deep sorrow, not only to his family but to the great army of people who knew him and loved him, was passionately fond of music and of poetry.

His flute was a constant source of delight to him, and he passed some of his leisure time in setting his favorite poems to music and playing the accompaniment to the words. The poem he loved best was the following, by Miss Adelaide Proctor. He set this music that beautifully brought out the delicate sweetness of the poem:

—"I can scarcely hear," she murmured
"For my heart beats loud and fast,
But surely in the far, far distance
I can hear a sound at last.
It is only the reapers singing,
As they carry home their sheaves;
And the evening breeze has risen,
And rustles the dying leaves."
—"Listen, there are voices singing,"
Calmly still she strove to speak,
Yet her voice grew faint and trembling,
And the red flush in her cheek.
"It is only the children playing
Below how their work is done,
And they laugh that their eyes are dazzled
By the rays of the setting sun."

Painter grew her voice and weaker
As with anxious eyes she cried,
"Down the avenue of chestnuts
I can hear a horseman ride."
It was only the deer that were feeding
In a herd on the clover grass.
They were startled, and fled to the thicket,
As they saw the reapers pass.

Now the night arose in silence,
And the deer lay in their leafy nest,
And the children were at rest,
There was only a sound of weeping
From watchers around a bed,
But rest to the weary spirit,
Peace to the quiet dead!

Fine Stallions.

A visit to the important stables of Messrs. Thompson and Haul, Indianapolis, Indiana, will convince any one of the real worth of their fine horses. Those desiring to purchase fine stallions for the coming season, cannot do better than to visit these stables before buying. Messrs. Thompson and Haul's prices are low, and they sell on terms to suit their customers. Their Hackneys, with their beautiful style and high-stepping action are peculiarly adapted to the wants and desires of the general public. Their Hackneys are specimens of the different draft breeds they import, and they will find it to their interest to prove their stock, that they may command better markets and better prices than heretofore.

From Dr. H. V. M. Miller.

Henry G. Slappey, Esq., Agent Century Company—Dear Sir: I am obliged to you for the opportunity of examining the prospectus of the "Century Dictionary" and Encyclopedic Lexicon of the English language, and also the proof sheet of the first volume of the work.

After a critical study of the plan of this publication, I am prepared to give it my hearty endorsement as well as my support. In its compass it greatly exceeds the Imperial English Dictionary which is the recognized standard in pronunciation and definition in Great Britain and its colonies. It is, in my judgment, not only an admirable lexicon accurate in its orthography and etymology, but exhaustive in its definitions. Besides it is an excellent substitute for the unwieldy encyclopedias that flood the market. The superlative merit of Professor Whitney, and his collaborators are gentlemen of great distinction in science, literature and art. The illustrations are numerous and helpful. It deserves a place in every professional and household library. Very respectfully,

LACES, EMBROIDERIES, ETC.

THE WORLD'S FAIR IN MINIATURE!

Of course go to Chicago in '92 where you will see the grandest collection of the world's best fabrics; but at present, the immediate present, if you wish to see a fine collection, a really grand display, of the newest and rarest things in fabrics for Easter, look in at

We make this suggestion with a good deal of confidence and boldness because our new Easter Goods are just coming in by every train. Silks in such profusion of delicate tints, and such innumerable shades of delicate, novel shadings, that it wears the eye to look upon them, and it takes up too much valuable space to enumerate the various brands and kinds; but Satin la Reine from 50c to $1.50.

Armure in all colors from 75 to $1.50.
Rhodame from 75c to $1.50.
Rean de Loire $1 to $1.50.
Printed Shanghai and Pekin.
Printed Pongee 35 to $1.50.

TRIMMINGS OF EVERY DESCRIPTION!

Other local houses may attempt to delude the public with the idea of the prevailing simplicity of design in spring fashions. The fact is patent: Such attempts only show the utter inability of their power to cope with the live progressiveness of wide-awake houses which keep abreast of the times. If you will visit the great emporium of the south—John Ryan's Sons—and see the display of new designs in Trimmings for the season you will pity the feebleness of purility. The most gorgeous display of Trimmings in the south. Trimmings from 50 cents to $60 per yard.

All conceivable fancies and wonderful imaginings. The old aphorism that nothing in this world is sure but death and taxes should be supplemented with the word "Easter;" so don't let this cold snap delude you. Easter will be upon you and you will want to dress. The fastidious can even be suited in many stores, but if your taste is fastidious and your purse light, and still you wish to gratify a whim as to novelty in shadings, colors and tints, why go to

AND SEE THE

Drap d'Almas,
Formosas,
Henriettas,
And fifty other new lines of dress goods that are just coming in.

The Scotchman is put to the blush by the novelties in plaids that have just come in, and are marked from 12½c yard to 65c yard. All the colors of the rainbow and the shadings thereof are to be found in the beautiful line of Crepe de Chein Suitings at $1.75 per yard. This appears to be the most enticing bargain in the store: All shades of Evening Nets at 75c per yard, really worth $2.25 per yard.

Now why should a lady look ill-dressed and untidy because of a rip in her glove when we have on our glove counter 946 dozen pairs of dressed kids in black and in colors to match any dress you have, which are marked 50 cents a pair?

Solid Sateens at 7c yard.
Cocheco Sateens at 10c yard.
Favorite Sateens at 20c yard.
Ex-French Sateens at 40c yard.
Cashmere Ombre at 40c yard.
Scotch Zephyrs at 25c yard.

THE GREAT SALE OF EMBROIDERIES STILL CONTINUES!

The greatest bargains of the age in all styles and widths of Embroideries and Laces. The whole stock of an immense importer bought at a sacrifice. Do not miss this, the great opportunity of your life. You will never see such bargains again. But why waste space and your patience by trying to enumerate what we cannot begin to count, they are so near numberless. Come and see for yourselves.

And while you are picking up bargains, if you are wise, you won't fail to look at that jointless Canton matting at 20c yard. There are 256 rolls of it, just received, and it is worth looking into.

MEMORIAL DAY.

A GREAT CONCOURSE OF PEOPLE EXPECTED IN ATLANTA.

The Committees Reporting Progress, and all the Arrangements Moving Steadily Toward Perfection.

The preparations for Memorial day are moving steadily toward perfection.

The different committees are reporting progress to Colonel Millidge and the present indications are that Atlanta will have some difficulty in accommodating the crowd which will gather within her limits on the 26th of April.

Colonel Thomas, the chairman of the invitation committee, reports that he has seen to it that no Confederate officers have been omitted, and the list of invitations sent out is daily increasing.

Mr. W. D. Ellis, the chairman of the transportation committee, held a large conference Wednesday evening with Colonel Slaughter, of the Southern Passenger association, and when Colonel Slaughter left yesterday to be present at the meeting of general passenger agents, which is being held in Florida, he promised to see to it that special rates on the best possible terms should be granted all Confederate veterans who wished to be in Atlanta on Memorial day.

Captain Forbes is also taking active measures to have the military companies of the state well represented and he reports good success as far as he has gone.

Mr. Frank T. Ryan has written the following letter to General H. Reynolds, of Arkansas, who is his personal friend and old commander. General Reynolds commanded a brigade in Walther's division, and was one of the bravest officers in the Confederate army. Mr. Ryan hopes and believes that his invitation will be accepted.

General D. H. Reynolds, Lake Village, Ark. Dear General:—On the 26th day of April, our Memorial day, the day on which we decorate our soldiers' graves in our cemetery, our Confederate Veterans' association have conceived the idea, and are now making the plan, of having all the old survivors present. We will extend invitations to General Joseph E. Johnston, General Fitzhugh Lee, General Longstreet, and to the major and brigadier generals, colonels, majors, and in fact all the officers and privates. According to the laws of nature it will not be much longer before we will be compelled to step down and out, and in all probability this will be the last opportunity of seeing and being with our old comrades. It is the thought of a century, or twenty-five years, since Johnston surrendered at Bentonville, and it is our intention to have a general reunion. It is the thought of the most of them will accept the invitation, and will be present. In connection with the general invitation herein enclosed, I herewith extend to you a special one, and ask that you make my house your home during your stay, as nothing would afford me more pleasure than to welcome you to our city, and have you break bread with my own vine and fig tree. In and around our city there are several places of note, and to you would be of interest, on the very spot where the battle of the 23d July, 1864, was fought, and where General Walker, our side, and General Sherman on the Federal, were killed, is a lovely park, through which the old ditch and railroad have been reserved. I trust that you will give this your serious consideration and make up your mind to come. I will anxiously look for an answer, and hope it will be favorable. With much esteem, I am truly yours, FRANK T. RYAN.

Pimples, Sores, Aches and Pains.
When a hundred bottles of sarsaparilla or other pretentious specifics fail to eradicate in-born scrofula, or contagious blood poison, remember that B. B. (Botanic Blood Balm) has gained many thousands of victories, in as many seemingly incurable instances. Send to the Blood Balm Co., Atlanta, Ga., for "Book of Wonders," and be convinced. It is the only TRUE BLOOD PURIFIER.

G. W. Messer, Howell's X Roads, Ga., writes: "I was afflicted nine years with sores. All the medicine I could take did me no good. Then I tried B. B. B. and bottles cured me sound."

Mrs. S. M. Wilson, Round Mountain, Texas writes: "A lady friend of mine was troubled with bumps and pimples on her face and neck. She took three bottles of B. B. B., and her skin got soft and smooth, pimples disappeared and her health improved greatly."

James L. Bower, Atlanta, Ga., writes: "Some years ago I contracted blood poison. I had no appetite, my digestion was ruined, rheumatism drew up my limbs so I could hardly walk, my throat was cauterized five times. Hot Springs gave me no benefit and my life was one of torture until I gave B. B. B. a trial, and, surprising as it may seem, the use of five bottles cured me."

The First Baptist Tomorrow.
Rev. Warren A. Candler, D. D., will fill Dr. Hawthorne's pulpit tomorrow morning at the First Baptist church. Dr. Candler is one of the most brilliant preachers in the South, and his sermons are always something when he speaks, and understands thoroughly the use of the English language. He is a perfect speaker, one who goes direct to the mark, and who calls things by their right names, and he has that Christian manhood which prompts him to deal vigorous blows in behalf of truth and right. His sermon tomorrow will doubtless be a notable one, and the large congregations that always attend his church will doubtless be highly entertained. The offering will be for the "Angels' Serenade," sung by Mrs. Dow, with violin and organ accompaniment. Other parts of the programme of music will be equally choice and well rendered.

DRY GOODS, NOTIONS, ETC.

Do You Want a Bargain in Dry Goods?

If so, the Disorganizers of High Prices

Will be pleased to have you call this week and take advantage of OUR LOW CUT PRICES. We are now prepared to show more true and genuine bargains than a half a dozen houses. We are very grateful for the splendid trade given us by our many patrons this last month. We have long since realized the fact that first class goods at bargain prices is what the people want, so we have adopted for our motto BARGAINS. And to prove the assertion we give you a few prices. Did you ever see anything like this: 20c dress DeBeize for 7 1/2c, 12 1/2c DeLeine for 5c, 35c dress Plaid for 15c, same as sold in early fall for 35c, these have been cut to 15c to close out. Henriettas in all colors and black.

Extra Bargains in Black Goods This Week.

5,000 short length Calicoes for almost nothing. Will open Monday another big lot of those 9 1/2c Gingham for 4 1/2c.

Our Cashmere Ombres are exquisite, they are the prettiest dress fabrics ever imported. We had special patterns brought out, so you will not be worried to death by seeing everybody dressed just alike if you trade with us.

We are now ready to show new Silks, new Woolen Goods and a most exquisite line of Combination Suits. Anything you want in accordin plaited suits.

SPECIAL CUT PRICES ON ALL SILKS THIS WEEK.

To close out one lot of about 2,000 yards of Surah Silks, Gros Grain Silk, China Silks and Satins worth 75c to $1.50. The entire lot will be sold at 35c until closed out. Don't get left. 12 1/2c Chambray cut to 6 1/2c, 15c Ladies' Collars cut to 5 1/2c, 35c Chimesettes cut to 10 1/2c. We wish to remind you of one thing, our Collar buyer forgot himself and bought a ship load of these Collars and Chimesettes, and they have got to be sold in 30 days. While they are going at a big loss, we are happy to say the public will be benefitted by it. Remember the prices, Collars 5 1/2c, Chimesettes 10 1/2c.

Another lot and the last of those Ladies' Lace and Muslin Scarfs at 5c, 10c, 15c, 25c and 35c, worth 50c to as high as $4. This is the clearing up lick. Be on hand and get your share.

We sell the best Bleaching for 5c this side of anywhere. The best Sea Island for 5c this side of the cotton fields.

We have just 33 1/2 dozen left of those 35c Under Vests for Ladies. They go this week at 10c. Our Underwear Department is full of the most choice things for early spring, and we solicit the careful inspection of these lovely goods by all who are interested in handsome Underwear at bargain prices.

Another Big Job in Kid Gloves!

We will sell all those beautiful Satens worth 15c this week at 10c. Remember, we are making big cuts in Black Silks and Woolen Goods this week.

4 Cent Goods in Great Variety.

Our Embroideries and Laces certainly are the prettiest in this market, for we are constantly told so by ladies shopping, and to say they are cheap is a pale expression. We have marked these goods very low—this means cheaper than you ever saw them. Come and see. No trouble to show goods.

We only have a few Winter goods left and they will be slaughtered this week. Just come along and help slide them out, they will only cost you a trifle. No trouble to show goods. Come and see.
